

We are writing to let you know about an upcoming adjustment to pricing on the Rockwell Automation product portfolio.

From 20 September 2026, prices across the Rockwell Automation portfolio will increase by a weighted average of 3.45%. The change applies to part of the portfolio, not all of it, and varies by product.

The main driver is a change in US trade policy. In late July, one set of US import tariffs expired and was replaced by a new set at higher rates, covering a number of the countries where Rockwell Automation products are made and sourced. That extra cost flows through to list prices. On top of that, the components used in these products, particularly electronics, have continued to get more expensive across the industry.

Updated price files will be available online from 28 August 2026, so you can review the changes ahead of the effective date.

We know a change like this affects your quoting and project planning, so we would rather you hear it from us early. If you have any questions, please reach out to your NHP Account representative.

Thank you for your continued partnership with NHP.

Yours Sincerely,
Michael Liberatore
Chief Sales Officer
